A Pre-Wedding Lift

The reason why a facial is always so effective is, of course down to correct use of product, but more importantly it is in the application. Sweeping hands and deep massage is absolutely key, if you read the small print of your daily beauty routine you will normally find all sorts of diagrams on how to do it. I know I am not always too good at keeping to this first thing in the morning, but it seems to make the world of difference to your skin.

Facial gadgets have always seemed a bit extraordinary to me, when they first came onto the market I was shocked that my hands weren't good enough for the job, I persevered until I discovered Sarah Chapman's Facialift Facial Massager £25.00.

The wonderful Sarah Chapman is famed for her fast tapping, pinching and knocking massage in her facials and the Facialift facial massager mimics all this. With 8 heads and 48 massaging nodules the facialift reshapes, refines and tones the contour of your face, releasing tensing and aiding lymphatic drainage. It really does make a difference, even after once use you can feel your muscles tingling and waking up.

Its great to use alone or with Sarah Chapmans Overnight Facial as it really pushed the product in and the result are far better.

The Facialift is a sure way to give your skin a lift in the lead up to the big day
