Sarah Chapman Facial Lift

Just when the novelty of wacky whisk-like scalp massagers has worn off, a nifty new tool arrives. This one from London's sought-out facialist Sarah Chapman of culty Overnight Facial serum fame.

Its construction perplexed us, but the simple directions had us pushing the gadget against the chin and up the jawline in no time. And it proved relaxing. While we can't vouch for its long-term effects (it's just been released in the states), the tension-release and toning claims rang true. The directions said to then gently tap the area with the small paddle on the opposite end to stimulate the skin — but we were happy to skip the slapping ourselves in the face part.
